The Honorable Ben Ramsey then took the Constitutional Oath of Office as Lieutenant Governor of the State of Texas, the oath being duly administered by the Honorable Robert W. Calvert, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Texas.

Speaker Turman presented Senator Ray Roberts, President Pro Tempore of the Senate, who introduced Lieutenant Governor Ben Ramsey to the Joint Session and the assemblage.

Lieutenant Governor Ben Ramsey then addressed the Joint Session and the assemblage, as follows:

"Mr. Chief Justice, Governor Daniel Mr. Speaker, Members of the Texas House and Senate, and My Fellow Citizens—

To have taken this constitutional oath to administer those historic surroundings... and for a sixth elective and consecutive term... is more than a great personal honor... it is to me a challenge... a chal­ genle to action for a growing, vigorcous, progressive Texas... A Texas second to none in its protection of the rights of all, of its obligations to its needy, of its building for a better day for all of its citizens. It is a challenge to action, and action now.

I thank you for the confidence of a high trust. For me, and for my family, this is a memorable occasion. To all of you, I can only say that today I am reconsecrated and re-dedicated, in all humility, to the tasks that lie ahead.

Ours is a glorious history... the grandest record of achievement of any state or nation. On January 17, 1821, Moses Austin received the first Texas land grant. One Hundred forty years ago today, Austin was authorised by New Spain to bring into this territory three hundred colonists. Today we are a great commonwealth of more than nine million citizens... in a vigorous and free society.

It is inspiring to refresh ourselves anew at the fountain of our match­less history. It is good to review the ideals and inspirations of fifty and a hundred years ago. But it is not enough for us to rest upon the laurels of our forefathers. We must move forward. Our heritage demands a forthright policy of action today for an even greater Texas of tomorrow.

Conditions change with passing years but principles and processes of democratic government remain the same. Fundamentally, a good government is a responsive government. Through their delegated representa­tives—and through us alone—can the people's wishes be translated into reality.

It is our duty to balance the budget. The deficit must be wiped out. Income must equal outgo. These cold facts of the balance sheet must be recognized.

You, the people of Texas, have demanded a government of the first class... the best schools, the best welfare and health programs. I believe in necessary services of the first class. We, as Legislators, are pledged in our oaths to equal and uniform taxation. Good citizenship demands that any and all sponsors of increased expenditures be willing to bear their fair share of the cost. They owe it to themselves, to the Legisla­tute, and to their fellow taxpayers to come, not as critics with selfish pur­pose, but as taxpayers ready to pay the bill for services they seek. With this kind of teamwork—and with this kind of responsibility as taxpayers alone—will we move forward.

The cause of good government does not rest alone on finances. I firmly believe in the sufficiency of our government to provide an all-impor­tant water conservation program. This is as vital to the welfare of our grow­ing population as are the aforementioned essential services. The responsi­bility of a sound water program must be met. To that end, I pledge you my constant cooperation.
Another of our tasks must be completed without delay. The people said in unmistakable clear voice at the ballot box last November that the small loan business must be cleaned up. The time is now. We must enact laws of unquestioned force to oust loan sharks who prey upon the small money borrowers. You and I must meet this obligation with action at this session.

The eyes of Texas are upon us as we legislate for nine million people. Let me urge every member of the Legislature, every state official and every citizen to weigh carefully each piece of legislation. Let us have the courage and the good sense to separate the non-essential from the essential. I earnestly trust intelligence may inspire our deliberations, tolerance may guide our tongues, and justice may seriously guide every legislative act.

I will not say to you that we must meet and solve our problems! I say to you . . . in the spirit of the great men who have gone before us in Texas . . . that we will meet and solve our problems, with God's Will.

Governor Daniel . . . Mr. Speaker Turman . . . I am honored to be a member of this powerful triumvirate of people's confidence. As President of the Senate, I pledge to you, and to the people of Texas . . . every citizen of this state . . . my wholehearted cooperation in working for a greater Texas and a greater day for all Texans."

The Honorable James A. Turman, Speaker of the House of Representatives, stated that the Oath of Office would be administered to the Honorable Price Daniel, the Governor-elect of Texas.

The Governor-elect, the Honorable Price Daniel, then took the Constitutional Oath of Office as Governor of the State of Texas, the Oath being duly administered by the Honorable Robert W. Calvert, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Texas.

Speaker Turman then presented Governor Price Daniel to the Joint Session and the assemblage.

Governor Daniel then addressed the Joint Session and the assemblage, as follows:

"For the third time the people of Texas have entrusted with me this, the greatest honor and highest office within their power. With sincere humility and deep gratitude I again accept the office of Governor and express to all the people of Texas my heartfelt appreciation. My special thanks go to all my family, associates, and friends whose constant assistance have made this possible. I pray that my actions will be worthy of your faith and confidence.

I thank all of you who are present for this occasion. Especially do I welcome the distinguished representatives of the adjoining States of the Republic of Mexico. We appreciate your joining with us in another demonstration of the friendship and good will which exist between our people and your people. You honor us by your presence.

As stated at my previous inaugurations, it is ever significant to me that the official oath of office which I have just taken ends with the words, 'So help me God.' I shall continue to take seriously this plea for Divine guidance with which I have sealed my pledge to 'preserve, protect, and defend' the Constitution and laws of the United States and of this State.

For the third time this morning, we began an inaugural day by stressing the importance of spiritual guidance in the lives of men and the affairs of government at a prayer breakfast for State officials and members of the Legislature. I appreciate the inspiring message which Dr. W. R. White, President of Baylor University, delivered on that occasion.

I offer my wholehearted cooperation to you, Governor Ramsey, and to you, Mr. Speaker, to the members of the Legislature, and to the other officials of our State. We have subscribed to the same oath of duty. Together, we must work for a free and noble people who govern themselves through those of us who act as their chosen representatives. May we strive always to make our government truly of, by, and for the people."
January 17, 1961  HOUSE JOURNAL  59

Today marks the thirteenth time that I have taken an official oath similar to the one repeated here; three times as a member of the Texas Legislature, once as Speaker of the Texas House of Representatives; once as a private in the United States Army, then as an officer; three times as Attorney General of Texas; once as a member of the United States Senate; and now three times as Governor. Each time, as again today, my heart has been moved by a renewed pledge of allegiance to uphold and defend government by law rather than by men.

In accordance with this oath, I shall uphold and defend the Constitution of our dual sovereignties in all of their parts. However, as pledged two years ago, I shall continue to emphasize and fight for those neglected portions of both State and Federal Constitutions which recognize that 'powers not delegated to the United States by Constitution . . . are reserved to the States . . . or to the people.'

The real strength of America lies not in Washington nor in concentrated power or centralized authority. The central power of this nation lies in the faith and strength of our people and in the strength of our States and our local units of self-government.

As Governor, I shall continue the fight against further encroachments by the central government upon the rights of our State and our people. To be successful in this fight, we must properly discharge the State responsibilities which accompany those rights. We must have as much talk and action on State responsibilities as we have on State rights. This has been my philosophy since I entered public service as a member of the Texas House twenty-two years ago, and it shall continue as the guiding principle of this administration.

Today we face many responsibilities which must be exercised for continued growth, prosperity, and sound government in our State. By properly meeting these State responsibilities, we will contribute not only to the future of our State, but to the preservation of constitutional government and the original concept of State Federal relations which gave birth and strength to our Nation.

I am proud of the progress of this administration and the State responsibilities which have been exercised during the past four years. Through legislative and administrative action, we have restored honesty, integrity, and public confidence in our State government.

For the first time, we have a statewide planning program for water conservation and development. We have had the State's largest highway construction program, and along with it we inaugurated the first statewide highway safety program, which has appreciably reduced the slaughter on our streets and highways. We have established the Texas Industrial Commission and the first State program for attracting new industries, tourists, and new residents. We have made improvements in public education, including salary increases for public school and college teachers.

Other enactments during this administration included creation of the Texas Youth Council, the first paid parole system for adults, increased pensions for the aged, and improvements in our State hospitals, special schools, correctional institutions, and law enforcement programs.

Indeed, these have been significant accomplishments during the past four years. They have been important exercises of State responsibility. However, in a growing State like Texas, we hardly have time to look back with pride before it is necessary to look forward with action for accomplishments and continued expansion.

In practically every field, which I have mentioned, the passage of time, our rapid population increase, and the need to meet competition of other States have placed upon us the need for further improvements and additional revenue. If we are to pay for present services and make the improvements necessary to keep pace with the rapid growth of our State, we have the further responsibility of raising sufficient revenue to retire the present deficit and operate this State on a balanced budget.
This is not the first time that a Texas Legislature has faced a deficit, and Texas is not the only State which has the problem of raising new taxes. Throughout the history of this State, Texas Legislatures have been faced with deficits more often than with balanced budgets, and now and during the past two years most of the other States have been confronted with needs for new taxes—some of them greater than ours.

None of this lessens in any degree the magnitude of the fiscal problem which faces the 57th Legislature. It is greater in total dollars than any before in our history. I shall present the reasons, the details, and recommended solutions in my first message to the Legislature. This much I shall say now:

I shall recommend to the Legislature that we place first and foremost the retirement of the deficit, and I shall submit this as an emergency matter. I feel strongly that we should arrange to pay for past commitments and present debts before undertaking new programs and new expenditures.

In the meantime, it is my sincere hope that those citizens and business groups who believe in State rights and State responsibilities will lend their cooperation and support to the Legislature in its effort to adequately balance State government. All too often some who proclaim the loudest about State rights are in the forefront against State taxes, even with State taxes being deductible from the Federal income tax. Those who thus contribute toward higher Federal tax collections and lower State revenue simply weaken the power of the States in our system of State-Federal relations. So often the same taxpayers end up financing Federal programs which the States could have operated at far less expense and with far more efficiency and success.

I am convinced that the people of Texas realize that the phenomenal growth of our State requires additional taxes. I believe they will welcome prompt action, and that friction, dispute, and delays will result in far more disappointment and criticism than whatever solution might be finally adopted. It is my hope that all of us in State government will look upon our task not only as a serious problem but as a great challenge. Some of the finest chapters of Texas history have been written by Governors and legislators who faced problems and met challenges that demanded a full measure of courage and statesmanship. Texas, as we know it today, was built by men and women who had the courage to overcome hardships, to withstand selfish interests, and to fight for what they believed to be right. As they met the challenges of the past, I have faith that we shall meet the challenges of today.

Again, to you, Governor Ramsey, Mr. Speaker, and members of the Legislature, I pledge my full cooperation, and I earnestly solicit for all of us the understanding, counsel, and support of all the people whom we are honored to serve.

Senator Roberts presented the Honorable Eligio de la Garza who introduced the following guests to the Joint Session and the assembly: Honorable and Mrs. Angel Cano del Castillo, Consul General, of San Antonio, Texas; Ing. Jose F. Muñoz, official representative for the Governors of Nuevo Leon and Coahuila; Dr. Adan Mercado Cerda, official representative for the Governor of Tamaulipas; Honorable and Mrs. Rafael Linares, Consul of Mexico, Austin, Texas; Honorable and Mrs. J. Wise, Chairman of the Good Neighbor Commission; Honorable and Mrs. Glenn E. Garrett, Chairman of the International Committee; Judge and Mrs. St. John Garwood, Co-Chairman of the International Committee, and Mrs. Ina May McAdams, of the Good Neighbor Commission.

Speaker Turman then introduced former Governor and Mrs. Dan Moody.

Speaker Turman stated that the Benediction would be offered by Dr.
January 17, 1961

The Benediction was offered by Dr. Marvin Vance, as follows:

"The Lord bless you and keep you; the Lord make his face to shine upon you and be gracious unto you. The Lord lift up his countenance upon you and give you peace; both now and forevermore.—Amen."
