WHEREAS, Miss Constance Harrington, having completed her course of studies at Texas Christian University, met the now State Representative Frank C. Eikenburg while they were both working for Senator John Tower; and

WHEREAS, In spite of this, in a moment of madness, in the Fall of 1972, she agreed to become his wife; and

WHEREAS, On March 31, 1973, at the First Christian Church of Plano, they were married, in the presence of many friends and witnesses, (Frank was no dummy in this matter); and

WHEREAS, They moved to Plano, Texas, where Connie's family has lived for six generations; and

WHEREAS, Connie's father had been active civically and politically, having been a member of the School Board of Trustees, and Mayor of Plano, and a Candidate for U.S. Congress; and

WHEREAS, Frank and Connie immediately began to carry on this family tradition of civic and political involvement, with Frank serving on the Advisory Board of the Plano Chamber of Commerce, as Chairman of the Collin County Historical Commission, on the Board of Directors of Plano General Hospital; and, Connie serving as a founder and Charter member of the Plano Service League, which is involved in numerous charitable activities; and the both of them involved in the founding of, and much of the success of the Plano Heritage Association and in so many political campaigns it would be impossible to enumerate them all here; while also both being very active members of the First Christian Church of Plano; and

WHEREAS, On December 10, 1977, a lovely daughter, Constance Emily Eikenburg, came into Frank and Connie's lives; and

WHEREAS, Connie has worked diligently at providing both Frank and Emily with a good family atmosphere by balancing beautifully their public and home life, letting neither suffer from a lack of attention; and

WHEREAS, When Frank became involved in his own campaign for State Representative, Connie put aside all of her activities other than the role of wife and mother, and campaigned diligently, not only as the candidate's wife, attending coffees and receptions and shaking hands; but also as a tireless campaign volunteer, looking up phone numbers, stuffing, sealing, and sorting mailings, and recruiting and inspiring others to become active in Frank's campaign by her unshakable belief in Frank's qualifications; and

WHEREAS, Connie has withstood with great patience and amazing fortitude and good humor for a number of years, (and there are those who know that one week of keeping up with Frank's schedule is like a month of keeping up with a less-involved individual), the many rigors attendant upon life as the spouse of an adamant politician; now, therefore, be it

ORDERED PRINTED

By unanimous consent, the following parliamentary inquiry was ordered printed in the journal:

Representative Carlyle Smith has made a parliamentary inquiry concerning the issuance of subpoenas by the House Committee on Urban Affairs and access by committee members, other House members, and the public to information in those subpoenaed documents or in documents voluntarily submitted to the committee.

The authority of a committee to issue subpoenas is defined by the Legislative Reorganization Act of 1961 (Article 5429f, Vernon’s Texas Civil Statutes) and the House Rules.

Section 12 of the Legislative Reorganization Act of 1961 provides that:

Each committee of the Legislature, or of either House thereof, standing or special, when authorized by Resolution or by Rule of Procedure of the House or Houses creating such committee, shall have the power and authority to issue process to witnesses at any place in the State of Texas, to compel the attendance of such witnesses, and to compel the production of all books, records, documents and instruments as the committee shall require ...

The Chairman shall issue in the name of the committee such subpoenas and other process as the committee shall determine.

Section 14 of the Act provides that a person who fails to comply with a subpoena is guilty of the misdemeanor offense of Contempt of the Legislature, punishable by a fine of $100 to $1,000 and a jail term of 30 days to 12 months.

Rule 4, Section 22, of the House of Representatives, provides that any standing committee, “(b) by a record vote of not less than two-thirds of those present and voting, a quorum being present,” may issue subpoenas. The rule then goes on to largely track the quoted language of Section 12 of the Legislative Reorganization Act of 1961.

Neither the statute nor our rules purport to define the purposes for which a subpoena may be issued, and neither the statute nor the rules specify the manner by which a person to whom a subpoena is addressed may challenge the validity of a subpoena. Rule 4, Section 14, of the House of Representatives provides, however, that “to the extent applicable, the rules of evidence and procedure in the civil courts of Texas, shall govern the hearings and operations of each committee.” It is the opinion of the chair that this rule, as it applies to the issuance of subpoenas by committees, has the effect of limiting a committee’s subpoena power to matters relevant to a proceeding within the committee’s jurisdiction. It is also the opinion of the chair that, by virtue of this rule, a person subpoenaed by a House committee who believes that the subpoena is invalid in whole or in part may, by himself or through counsel, pursue before the committee the remedies that would be available to a person subpoenaed by a court, including a request that a subpoena be quashed or modified.

Questions have been raised about the manner in which a committee may authorize the issuance of a subpoena, particularly the degree of specificity required of a motion made for the purpose. It is the opinion of the chair that both the House Rules and the Legislative Reorganization Act contemplate that a committee, when authorizing the issuance of a subpoena, must specify the particular witness or the particular types of documents the committee seeks to subpoena, and a committee may not merely delegate to the committee chair authority to issue such subpoenas as he or she sees fit. While the motion to issue a subpoena need not specify every detail the subpoena is to contain, the committee, when adopting the motion, should understand the identity of the witness or the types of documents sought.

Concerning the right of committee members, other House members, or the public to inspect a document obtained by committee subpoena, it is the opinion of the chair that unless the document is subpoenaed for legitimate purposes of a matter under consideration in an executive session (Rule 4, Section 13, of the House of Representatives authorizes executive sessions only in the case of the General Investigating Committee or a committee considering an impeachment or similar quasi-judicial proceeding), a subpoenaed document, except to the extent it may contain information irrelevant to the purposes for which it was subpoenaed, becomes a part of the official proceedings of the committee and, as such, is public information. Therefore, any member of the committee, any member of the house, or any member of the public is entitled to have access to the document.

If, pursuant to a subpoena, a committee obtains a document that contains information irrelevant to the purposes of the subpoena, the committee would then be in the same position as a court that had obtained such a document. Just as the court in a civil case may determine what information obtained by subpoena is relevant to the case and should be admitted as evidence, the committee chairman may make such a determination. As is the case with procedural determinations in general, this determination is subject to appeal. For purposes of reviewing this determination and making any decision about an appeal, each member of the committee is entitled to examine the document in question in full. However, the document is not, at this point, a part of the official committee record.

Once a determination of relevance is made and the relevant portion of the document is entered in the record, that portion of the document becomes public information. As to any portions of the document excluded as irrelevant, if the excluded material remains in the custody of the committee, access to that material is governed by the open records law. If a member of the public requests access to that material, the person having custody of the document would, of course, be obliged to comply with that law. If the custodian should believe that the document, or any part of it, is excepted from disclosure under that law, he or she could seek a determination of the matter by the Attorney General.

Finally, as to access to documents voluntarily submitted to a committee, it is the opinion of the chair that the same principles just enunciated with respect to subpoenaed documents apply. Subject to the possible exclusion of information irrelevant to the matter under consideration by the committee, the document when received as a part of the committee record becomes a public record. Of course, the same considerations with regard to information received in connection with an authorized executive session would also apply.
