The invocation was offered by Chase Bowers, pastor, Temple Bible Church, Temple, as follows:

Sovereign and holy God, we come to you in the name of your son, Jesus, giving thanks for life and breath and everything else. Every good and perfect gift comes from you, and in you we live and move and have our being. Thank you, God for all of the men and women in this room, for their families, and for the staffs that serve with them. By your grace and through our democratic process, you have assembled some of the brightest minds in our state in this room to serve your purposes for Texas. God, would you give wisdom to these men and women to execute their duties in a way that honors you and causes our state to continue to flourish.

Lord, grant that their faith would inform their decisions. Help them to love what is good, beautiful, and true, and carry out their duties in such a way that goodness, beauty, and truth are understood by our people as the gifts from you that they indeed are. Father, grant that these men and women would, above any political agenda or platform, love you, love your word, love your ways, and love one another. And may their service bring them joy, and may it ultimately bring honor to you, O God. We pray in the name above every other name, Jesus, our savior and king. Amen.

The chair recognized Representative Dominguez who led the house in the pledges of allegiance to the United States and Texas flags.
