MAJOR STATE CALENDAR
HOUSE BILLS
SECOND READING

The following bills were laid before the house and read second time:

CSHB 14 ON SECOND READING
(by Goldman, Herrero, Geren, Anchia, Craddick, et al.)

CSHB 14, A bill to be entitled An Act relating to the creation of the Texas Electricity Supply Chain Security and Mapping Committee.

CSHB 14 - REMARKS

REPRESENTATIVE GOLDMAN: Members, first and foremost I want to thank Speaker Phelan and his staff for help with CSHB 14. I certainly want to thank every single member of the Committee on Energy Resources for their help and, of course, Chairman Paddie and his committee. This bill came out as a result of our 26 hours of hearing in two days that we listened to the stakeholders as to how we can better prepare, God forbid, that a storm like Uri ever happens again. So CSHB 14 establishes the Texas Electricity Supply Chain Security and Mapping Committee for the purpose of mapping the state's electricity supply chain, identifying critical infrastructure sources along the supply chain, to make recommendations on measures to prepare facilities that provide electric and gas services to maintain service in extreme weather events and to designate priority service needs in extreme weather events. Members, the committee will include the executive directors of the Railroad Commission and the PUC, the ERCOT CEO, and the chief of the Texas Division of Emergency Management. This committee will come together, make recommendations, and, most importantly, give a report to the State of Texas, to the legislature, by January 1 of next year.

REPRESENTATIVE ANCHIA: Thank you for working with members of the committee to craft this legislation. I just wanted to get this exchange on the record for intent purposes. I know this bill was originally described as a weatherization bill. In fact, this bill forms a committee that is going to make recommendations to the legislature about how to create, sort of, systemwide resiliency, and it will make recommendations for everything from the wellhead all the way to the generators. Is that right?

GOLDMAN: Yes, Representative Anchia. I guess I should have emphasized, believe it or not, this is a commonsense bill, commonsense legislation. Actually, electricity was turned off to the most important entities that needed to supply energy to the State of Texas, and this just requires them to map out where their critical infrastructure is and put them on the list so their electricity is not turned off in the future in cases like what happened back in February.

ANCHIA: And it's designed for the industry and the regulators to sit around the table together so that they can assess vulnerabilities throughout the entire system and make recommendations to us so then we can implement the appropriate regulatory and oversight regime to, as you said, avoid what happened with Winter Storm Uri, correct?

GOLDMAN: That's correct. This is basically identifying what is critical infrastructure out there, putting them on a list so that those entities don't turn their electricity off since they are the ones supplying the needs for electricity to be delivered to the 29—going on 30—million Texans.

REPRESENTATIVE KACAL: I know ERCOT put out information on all the outages during the storm, but I've been told that the Railroad Commission does not require any reporting on outages during the storm. Is that right?

GOLDMAN: I think you would have to ask some people at the Railroad Commission, but my understanding is that's correct.

REPRESENTATIVE ROSENTHAL: Chair Goldman, can I ask why the caption of this bill changed from its original?

GOLDMAN: This has been my bill from the start, Representative Rosenthal.

ROSENTHAL: It wasn't originally about weatherization?

GOLDMAN: The bill that I filed from day one was not about weatherization. No, sir.

ROSENTHAL: This bill, as I understand it, creates a commission of appointees from other agencies, pretty much, right?

GOLDMAN: A committee, yes—not a commission but a committee.

ROSENTHAL: So are you aware that after the big freeze in 2011, there was a massive study done on the energy systems and the state of energy infrastructure here in Texas?

GOLDMAN: Yes, during our 26-hour hearing we heard many reports about what was reported after 2011 and what was not done, so that's why we filed this piece of legislation as a result of hearing that. This requires them to identify the critical infrastructure so they put that on a list so that their electricity is not turned off and that natural gas and other entities can keep going.

ROSENTHAL: Are you familiar with the 330-page report from the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission that was as a result of the 2011 freeze?

GOLDMAN: I am. Yes, sir.

ROSENTHAL: So are you aware of the content of it or are you just aware of its existence?

GOLDMAN: I'm aware of both.

ROSENTHAL: So it had specific recommendations about our energy infrastructure, did it not?

GOLDMAN: It had recommendations. Yes, it did.

ROSENTHAL: So can I ask what this new commission will do above and beyond or beside what was done on the report?

GOLDMAN: I can't speak to that, Representative Rosenthal, because I wasn't here in 2011 and neither were you and neither were over 100 members of this body. And so this is what we're doing now, okay? I can't speak to the past. I can only speak to the present and the future, and this is what we're doing today moving forward.

ROSENTHAL: So this in no way actually addresses the infrastructure issue that we just had other than to study it, is that right?

GOLDMAN: I'm sorry. I couldn't hear your question.

ROSENTHAL: So this bill actually does nothing substantive to address the infrastructure itself other than to study it, is that right?

GOLDMAN: No, this is not a study at all, Representative Rosenthal. This is establishing a committee that will map critical infrastructure and force them to be identified so that their electricity is not turned off.

ROSENTHAL: So you're saying mapping and identifying is distinct from a study?

GOLDMAN: This is not a study. This will form a committee that will identify what critical infrastructure is out there in the State of Texas so that it is identified and put on a list, put in a database, so that their critical infrastructure—the electricity that they provide, natural gas and other entities, to this state, to the 29 million Texans—so that their electricity is not turned off. The critical part of—I don't know how much of the hearing you listened to of the 26 hours that we sat through.

ROSENTHAL: All of it. I heard every hour.

GOLDMAN: Thank you. Common sense actually came into play. And had their electricity not been turned off, their wellheads could have produced natural gas and other entities to continue to supply electricity to the people of Texas.

ROSENTHAL: Didn't it come out in that committee that a significant amount of the natural gas production had already stopped before those facilities lost electricity?

GOLDMAN: I'm not advised, Representative Rosenthal.

ROSENTHAL: So the answer is yes.

GOLDMAN: No, I said I'm not advised. I don't know.

ROSENTHAL: Well, what I'm telling you is the information that we have for all of us indicates that a significant amount of natural gas production went offline for whatever reason, but it was before the electricity at those facilities went down.

GOLDMAN: Well, one of the reasons is because the electricity was turned off.

ROSENTHAL: I'm saying before the electricity to those facilities went down.

GOLDMAN: But I'm saying one of the reasons is their electricity was turned off, and this would make sure that their electricity will not be turned off when they're identified as critical infrastructure.

ROSENTHAL: And I agree that that is a step in the right direction, so please don't get me wrong. I'm for this. I just feel like this bill does not actually do anything to help our infrastructure other than look at it. So let me ask you, do you envision a timeline for when actual changes get made in our critical infrastructure? In the actual infrastructure itself, where the rubber meets the road, do you envision that these changes can be enacted in the field at the locations by the time we freeze again? And let's just imagine, for the purpose of the question, that we could freeze next year.

GOLDMAN: I don't understand your question.

ROSENTHAL: The question is, is this commission forming its mapping exercise on a timeline to effect changes in the field before this state freezes again?

GOLDMAN: Yes, they're required at the latest date to have it all identified and a report sent to the legislature by January 1 of next year.

ROSENTHAL: What if we're frozen on January 1 of next year?

GOLDMAN: Well, we're hoping they'll have it done before then. They have from the moment we pass this bill until January 1, so we're hoping it's certainly identified before then.

CSHB 14 was passed to engrossment.

HB 530 ON SECOND READING(by Patterson, White, Hull, Dominguez, et al.)

HB 530, A bill to be entitled An Act relating to the applicability to election judges of a prohibition on the carrying of a handgun at a polling place.

HB 530 - REMARKS

REPRESENTATIVE GOODWIN: As you mentioned, the attorney general issued a statement and the SOS put on their website an election advisory discussing this opinion from the attorney general: "The Office of the Attorney General concluded that because a presiding election judge has the same power of a district judge to enforce order and keep the peace . . . a presiding judge that possesses a handgun license is permitted to carry a handgun while serving as an election judge on Election Day in limited circumstances." Would your bill change these limited circumstances?

REPRESENTATIVE PATTERSON: No, ma'am, I don't believe so, and I believe that there are places where they would be restricted from carrying a firearm—for example, private property that doesn't allow firearms, certain universities you couldn't carry a firearm. So it's only where they are permitted to. Moreover, they would have to have an LTC to be able to carry as their duties as an election judge. I'll also add that the secretary of state also said, "Please be advised that if your presiding judges choose to carry a handgun into a polling place, they must do so responsibly. They should not"—and I repeat, not—"be displaying or discussing the weapon in a way that would be intimidating to voters, poll watchers, state inspectors, candidates, or other election workers."

GOODWIN: So just to be clear, it has that under a section called "Voter Intimidation." So your bill would not change that and election judges would have to have their gun concealed?

PATTERSON: It is advised that they do so responsibly.

GOODWIN: So they could openly carry in a polling place?

PATTERSON: It depends on the location. I don't believe that they would open carry, but it depends on the location whether or not it is allowed.

GOODWIN: Okay, and you mentioned universities as an excluded place, and private businesses if that private business excludes guns from their site. What about elementary schools or middle schools or high schools? I know a lot of schools are polling locations.

PATTERSON: Thank you for that question. So the law does get a little bit tricky here, and because the election judges are considered active judicial officers, they are exempt from Sections 46.02 and 46.03 of the Penal Code, which is where public schools fall. So they would be able to carry to a polling site at a public school. Active judicial officers are not exempt from Section 46.035 of the Penal Code where higher education institutions fall.

GOODWIN: If polling places are already able to have qualified peace officers who are trained and equipped with firearms present for safety during voting, why is it necessary to change the law allowing election judges to carry guns?

PATTERSON: Well, an election judge has a duty to "preserve order and prevent breaches of the peace and violations" in the Election Code. It is their duty to do that, and that's why the attorney general referenced a 1913 Supreme Court case giving election judges this power on Election Day. All we're simply doing is codifying that into law and adding what I think is a very commonsense extension of that, which is not just Election Day but also during early voting. We have a situation in my district where an election judge can carry on Election Day, but if he were to carry during early voting in the same manner in the same circumstances under the same duties, he would be a criminal.

GOODWIN: Thank you, Representative. There are reasons that guns are prohibited in polling places, given that licensed peace officers are already able to ensure public safety at voting sites. I believe your bill is dangerous and empowers someone who is not trained or licensed to act in the capacity of law enforcement officer, and I can't support it.

REPRESENTATIVE DOMINGUEZ: Mr. Patterson, does your bill in any way allow an election judge to display a firearm?

PATTERSON: No, sir, they are supposed to, per the secretary of state's orders, they're supposed to keep that gun concealed, hidden, not talk about it—you know, act like dozens and dozens of us here on the Texas floor do. You don't know who is carrying and who is not.

DOMINGUEZ: Thank you. And much like the bill that we passed last week as a body, displaying a firearm would be still a felony charge under current state law. Is that correct?

PATTERSON: Yes, sir.

DOMINGUEZ: And this law would apply to both democratic and republican election judges?

PATTERSON: Very important point. I am not simply trying to give guns to republicans at polling sites. These are for any election judge, republican or democrat or otherwise.

REPRESENTATIVE C. TURNER: You mentioned a minute ago in your answer to Representative Goodwin that the judge would have to hold an LTC. Did I hear that correctly?

PATTERSON: Yes, sir.

C. TURNER: So how does that intersect with the bill we passed last week in the house that removes the LTC requirements to be able to openly or concealed carry a handgun if you're 21 or older if that were to become law?

PATTERSON: Thank you for that question. I believe, based on what I have in my bill, that they would still be required to have an LTC to be able to carry into a polling site, but that's as of the current law right now. I can't really speak to any changes that may or may not happen in the future.

C. TURNER: Your intent, then, is based on the law right now that you have to have a license to carry?

PATTERSON: Yes, sir. And you can only carry in certain places. It does not allow election judges to carry at every polling site in every scenario. But I will say this: It does only allow election judges to carry while they're performing their duties—from the moment they arrive at the site and get out of their car to take the equipment in to the time that they leave. No other times as an election judge in any other capacity could they carry a gun in those places if it's otherwise prohibited.

C. TURNER: But if Representative Schaefer's bill from last week actually becomes law after this session, you're not sure if your requirement that the election judge hold an LTC—you're not sure if that's still applicable? Or if a judge doesn't have to have an LTC if Mr. Schaefer's bill becomes law?

PATTERSON: I mean, I'm not advised as to all of the different bills that have been filed and how this would shake out at the end of the day. But I can tell you that as of right now, the election judge would have to have an LTC to carry into a polling place where it's allowed.

C. TURNER: Shifting gears a little bit, you said that depending on the location. So if a location—I think you said a business—prohibits the carrying of a handgun, then this bill doesn't override those private property rights to prohibit a handgun. Is that right?

PATTERSON: Yes, sir. Private property rights are in place first. And if they don't prohibit it, then they would be able to carry. And I believe that HB 1927 that was voted on last week does not affect the Election Code at all. It would not affect this bill is what I'm told.

C. TURNER: And so I understand, a business—this may not apply. But what about a church? A lot of churches are polling locations.

PATTERSON: If they would—

C. TURNER: Some churches have different policies.

PATTERSON: Sorry about that, sir. I had to consult my attorney about something from last session. So if the church does not allow guns on their property, then they would not be able to carry in that instance.

C. TURNER: And I think you said a university—you offered that as an example as well. So are you talking about a private university? Because obviously, we have a campus carry law pertaining to publics. Could you explain how that would work?

PATTERSON: Yes, sir. So the campus carry law allows universities to come up with their own policies regarding handguns in which locations. So if the polling site was in a location that the university, public or private, determined that you could not carry a handgun, the election judge would not be allowed to carry a handgun at that location.

C. TURNER: I see. So if it's in an area that's restricted to where you're not allowed to carry a gun under normal circumstances, the election judge would not be able to carry it there?

PATTERSON: Yes, sir. That's correct.

C. TURNER: And I think Representative Goodwin asked a question—I just didn't hear the answer. So a public school—a lot of elementary, middle, high schools serve as polling locations during early voting and on Election Day—how would they be affected? How would those locations be affected?

PATTERSON: So active judicial officers are exempt from Section 46.02 and Section 46.03 of the Penal Code, which is where public schools fall. And so they're exempted from being barred from carrying a handgun in those locations.

C. TURNER: What about the intersection with federal law? There's federal prohibitions with weapons within a zone of a school, a certain perimeter of a school. In fact, it's a conversation I think we had on Friday from Representative Huberty when he brought that amendment on third reading on that bill. So would this in any way be in conflict with federal law as it relates to prohibitions on firearms in public schools?

PATTERSON: I'm not advised. The state law—they're exempted from 46.02 and 46.03.

C. TURNER: So it would exempt—as it relates to state law, an election judge would be exempted from the prohibition on guns in a school. You're not sure if there's a conflict with federal law?

PATTERSON: I would suspect that if federal law banned them from the school, that they wouldn't be able to carry. I mean, we can't pass laws that go against federal law, can we?

C. TURNER: I'm sorry. I didn't hear you.

PATTERSON: I mean, if federal law prohibited it, we can't pass a state law that would then allow it.

C. TURNER: That's correct. I would agree with that. Okay, last location question—libraries, as an example, or another city facility. Particularly, libraries are city owned. A lot of times those facilities will have prohibitions on coming in with a weapon, with a gun. How would the bill affect those types of polling locations?

PATTERSON: Well, this bill actually came to me from a precinct chair in The Colony, Texas, who serves as an election judge. And he is an election judge at a polling site at a city-owned facility where he can carry a firearm on Election Day currently. He just can't carry it during early voting, which is the reason for the bill. And so I think it would be up to that community to decide if they're going to allow guns on their property or not. In this case, he can carry a gun in that city-owned property.

C. TURNER: So if another city did have a prohibition on saying firearms can't be brought into a library or civic center or whatever the location is, then this bill would not supersede that local discretion?

PATTERSON: I would assume not.
