AUTHOR'S / SPONSOR'S STATEMENT OF INTENT

Under current law, when a dispute arises regarding a workers' compensation claim, the dispute may be resolved through a quasi-judicial process involving a hearing. The Division of Workers' Compensation (DWC) personnel who preside at these hearings are referred to in current law as "hearing officers." DWC's leadership believes that this title does not accurately reflect those employees' role. Hearing officers must be licensed attorneys, and, for purposes of the state employee classification titles established by the State Auditor's Office, they already are classified as administrative law judges. What's more, personnel discharging similar duties in other states' workers' compensation systems and in other agencies in Texas typically are referred to as administrative law judges. For clarity and consistency, Texas DWC hearing officers should be so called as well. H.B. 2111 would therefore amend the Division of Workers' Compensation statute to change references in that statute from "hearing officer" to "administrative law judge."

H.B. 2111 amends current law relating to changing statutory references to hearing officer and hearings officer to administrative law judge under the workers' compensation system.
